

The Moots as an Integral Part of the Law Course: The Singapore Experience

U Hla Hung

14 ATENEO L.J. 225 (1965)

TAGS(s): LEGAL AND JUDICIAL ETHICS, LEGAL PROFESSION, MOOT

The Article discusses the moot program as an excellent professional training ground in an otherwise purely academic and theoretical setting of law schools. It details the history, nature, form, contents, and procedure of the moot program in the University of Singapore. It states that since participation as Counsel, Judge or Court Reporter in the moots is compulsory for second year students and above, it also plays a part in their academic standing. More importantly, it concludes by emphasizing that moots instill the values of thoroughness, responsibility, and camaraderie in the students which will prepare them once they graduate and start practicing the law.