

A Brief History of the Future: Refugee Law and Policy in 2010, From Containment to Cooperation

José Victor Chan Gonzaga
48 ATENEO L.J. 1006 (2004)

SUBJECT(S): DISPLACED PERSONS, REFUGEES, REPATRIATION,
CONTAINMENT

KEYWORD(S): DISPLACED PERSONS, REFUGEES, REPATRIATION,
CONTAINMENT

This Article uses constructive speculation in attempting to present a scenario in refugee law and policy where the imperative driving policy is containment of displaced persons. It is premised on the likelihood of such an event prior to the realization of the critical need for more effective responses to displacement from national, regional, and international levels.